Klaus,

The Trump administration is considering restricting access to mifepristone, a medication used in nearly two-thirds of abortions in the United States and widely prescribed for miscarriage management.

Approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) 25 years ago, mifepristone has consistently been shown to be safe and effective. But Trump appointees are threatening to undo decades of progress.

Health Secretary RFK Jr. has formally ordered the FDA to review mifepristone's safety protocols, even citing a study widely condemned by medical experts as junk science. If the Senate fails to act, access could be restricted or banned in future regulatory decisions.

Globally, nearly 100 countries approve mifepristone, and the World Health Organization lists it as an essential medicine because of its proven safety, effectiveness, and role in reducing unsafe abortions.

This moment is urgent. The Senate has oversight power over FDA funding, confirmations, appropriations, and regulations. Our lawmakers must stand firm against RFK Jr. and Trump's attacks: protect mifepristone, shield the FDA from political meddling, and defend access to safe reproductive healthcare.
